Mr. Hickcox volunteered and went to San Francisco with the Seventh California Regiment U. S. V. I., in 1898, and was mustered out in Los Angeles the same year. For two terms he served as a trustee of the Los Angeles Public Library. In October, 1918, the firm of Hickcox & Crenshaw opened a law office at El Centro, in Imperial County, and Mr. Hickcox since that date has spent the major portion of his time in that city. Mr. Hickcox himself owns one of the finest law and private libraries in Southern California. He is very fond of outdoor sports, and is credited with having collected some of the rarest hunting trophies possessed by any citizen of Southern California. In 1899 he married Marie Frances Skinner. Mr. Hickcox is a member of the California Club, San Gabriel Country Club and the Sierra Club.

PATRICK COCHRANE CAMPBELL, whose business activities since coming to Los Angeles has prominently identified him in real estate circles, is a member of the governing committee and former treasurer of the Los Angeles Realty Board. During the World war he acted as general chairman of the Real Estate Committee for the Liberty and Victory Loans. This committee was one of the most successful among the various local organizations striving in friendly rivalry for the success of the loans, his committee during the Victory Loan campaign securing subscriptions aggregating nearly a million dollars.

The patriotic enthusiasm Mr. Campbell put into this work proceeds from sources planted deep in his own nature and character, and inherited from a line of ancestry that is no less than illustrious.

Only his more intimate friends are aware that Mr. Campbell is a grandson of the great churchman Alexander Campbell, founder of the Christian church also known as the Disciples of Christ. Alexander Campbell spent many years in the active ministry in western Pennsylvania and the northern part of what is now West Virginia, and among the hills of West Virginia he established Bethany College which has long been famous as a seat of learning and as a place of training for ministers of the Christian church. Alexander Campbell was a son of Elder Thomas Campbell, a Scotch Presbyterian preacher, and a grandson of Colonel James Campbell, in whose arms General Wolfe died on the Heights of Abraham. Thomas Campbell the poet was a cousin to Elder Thomas Campbell, who married Jane Carnego, a French Huguenot.

While Mr. Campbell's name indicates his Scotch ancestry he is also descended from a mingling of English, Welsh and French stocks. Alexander Campbell married Selina H. Bakewell, whose record may be traced through several centuries of English ecclesiastical dignitaries.

Patrick Cochrane Campbell's father was William Pendleton Campbell of Bethany, West Virginia, an attorney by profession, and youngest child of Alexander Campbell. William P. Campbell married Nannie Meaux Cochrane of Louisville, Kentucky. Her father Dr. Patrick Henry Cochrane was named for his great-half-uncle Patrick Henry, the Virginia orator and statesman, and through the same line of ancestry is related to two other famous orators, Lord Brougham of England and William Winston of Virginia. Dr. Cochrane was descended from the first Earl of Mar and was related to Admiral Sir Henry Cochrane, who defeated Napoleon's fleet at Basque Roads.

Nannie Meaux Cochrane's mother was Mary Jeanet Meaux, who was of French Huguenot and English ancestry, both Puritan and Cavalier. She was a descendant of General John Overton who commanded Cromwell's army at Hull, and was also related to Nathaniel Bacon, noted in American history as leader of the Virginian rebellion.

The membership he enjoys in the Sons of the American Revolution Patrick Cochrane Campbell derives through his illustrious ancestor Captain John Syme, by whom the first regiment of the American Revolution was armed and equipped. Captain John Syme's father was Colonel John Syme, Jr., and an officer in the Revolution, and his father, Colonel John Syme, Sr., fought in the Colonial wars.

While on the subject of ancestry it is appropriate to include some of the other famous characters found in the direct and collateral lines of Mr. Campbell of Los Angeles. Among them were Richmond Terrill, grandson of the Duke of Richmond, therefore of royal blood, and Lady Mary Waters; Hardin Burnley, who was president of the Governor's Council of the Colony of Virginia and served as a member of the Virginia House of Burgess, as also did other ancestors, Colonel John Syme, Sr., Colonel John Syme, Jr., Nicholas Merriweather, Sherwood Lightfoot, William Winston, Samuel Overton, Richard Meaux, David Crawford and John Thornton.

Patrick Cochrane Campbell was born at Louisville, Kentucky, July 4, 1871, and acquired his high school education at Wellsburg, in the vicinity of Bethany College, West Virginia. He also attended Kentucky University at Lexington and the University of Virginia at Charlottesville. During his early life he practiced his profession as a civil engineer, at first in the employ of railroads, subsequently on the Lake Erie and Ohio Ship Canal Survey and the Government Survey of the Ohio River. Since 1895 Mr. Campbell's chief business has been the buying and selling of real estate.

He has never been active in politics, is classified as an independent republican, and has strong views and convictions respecting the free, untrammeled liberties of the American people as based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of Independence. He is a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner and a member of the Phi Gamma Delta college fraternity. A member of the Protestant Episcopal church he is vestryman of St. James church at Los Angeles.

April 27, 1904, at Cincinnati, Ohio, Mr. Campbell married Martha Eliza Campbell, daughter of Dr. Albert Preston Campbell and Betty Woodson Coleman. Mrs. Campbell also has an interesting ancestral record, being a descendant of the "First Duke of Argyle." Her paternal grandfather Thomas Franklin Campbell of Scotch descent and a native of Louisiana, graduated from Bethany College, Virginia, and gave his life to educational interests. In that cause he became prominently known in the State of Oregon, where he spent the latter part of his life. He married Jane Eliza Campbell, who was born at Newry, Ireland, of Protestant parents and came to America when about fifteen years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell have three children: Albert Preston Campbell, Jr., Argyle Campbell, Jr., and William Pendleton Campbell, Jr.

Andrew Glassell Sr. From his arrival in California, in 1852, until his death, nearly fifty years later, Andrew Glassell Sr. was almost constantly busied with his professional and business responsibilities, and enjoyed a career that easily ranked him among the great lawyers of the state.

He was the fourth in direct succession to bear the name Andrew
